

Happy hens, smiling eggs: a pioneer project started in Andalusia for an ecological diet

LOCATION: Gibraleón (Huelva)

DURATION: 1:42

SUMMARY: Smiling eggs that come from happy hens, it is the idea of a farm that produces ecological eggs. Its promoter, an entrepreneur that used to work in a bank decided to move to the agricultural sector. For the moment he counts on 900 laying hens that relax with classical music and live in freedom. They are also fed with 100% organic products. The distinction of these eggs is their smile written with ecological ink.

VTR:

This is just one of the cares received by these hens.

AMBIENCE

"We are going to play 'El Amor Brujo', so they lay eggs with love"

For the moment they are only 900 but nothing is missing for them. They walk freely in the field, rest whenever they want in their small houses, and eat the best products.

"Perspectives are very good, it is a market that it is going to grow and people are becoming more conscious of how important it is to have a healthy diet. When they see how we prepare our eggs and how we have treated hens, I think that there are going to be easily sold."

More than 7.000 square meters where his laying hens are feed with 100% organic products and cereals.

WORKER

"This 100% ecological food we give to our hens is what makes our yolks being yellow."

Kilograms of food as a raw material to get these little eggs in just a few hours. After checking them they are also analysed with this ovoscopy.

"It allows us to see if the egg has any crack, if it has meat stains, anything that could make the egg not suitable for being sold."

And now they are ready to be sold. There are trying to make a difference and this smile makes it.
