"...of a designer, of a community manager, of a civil engineer, of an event organizer."

It is coworking, a work formula that is spreading fast, even to small cities. Here they share everything.

MAI CONTRERAS
Manager of Cocorocó

"Because it is not the same if you are a self-employed or freelance and you have to rent your office, assemble the furniture."

MELESIO PEÑA
Associate of Cocorocó

"Your incomes rise, thanks to the contacts you find here or to the movement of people you find more business opportunities."

The volume of business increases and also the performance. 75% of coworkers declares being more productive.

MARCELO VÁZQUEZ
Coworker

"You find places where there are people with the same problems as you, to share stories, and maybe you can give them good things."

In this coworking centre in Granada, several deals have been closed among its members. It is César's case, community manager and Araceli, graphic designer.

CÉSAR ACOSTA
Coworker

"Regarding work, the client of one of us is everyone's client."

ARACELI GARCÍA
Coworker

"It gives me partnership, team work..."

A collaborative work formula that is facing crisis. The number of centres that apply it doubles every year. In 2006 there were barely 30 in the whole world. Now in 2012, they are more than 2.000.
