

Mission Box employs cyclists and bikers to do your errands

LOCATION: Granada

DURATION: 1'26"

SUMMARY: Young entrepreneurs in Granada have developed Mission Box, an app that enables users to request personal delivery or errands services within their city. The growing company has approximately 20,000 users on their app, and have reached nearly 3,500 orders per month. The service is currently available in Granada, Jaen and Malaga and has received recognition from the Granada Association of Young Businessmen.

Imagine, you are at home or at work in need of a medicine from the pharmacy, but you are unable to get it yourself. Dilemmas like these have inspired the entrepreneurs from Granada behind Mission Box, an app that connects its users to delivery personnel who buy and deliver products right to you.

Gregorio López
CEO of Mission Box

"We are going to create a network of people who run errands and can move things from one side of the city to the other."

The initiative began in September of 2016 and in just six months has expanded to almost 20,000 users.

"Your request is our command. And we also offer something very easy: imagine it and it will be yours. Anything you can imagine within your city that can be delivered by bike and is legal, we are going to get it for you."

Initially the start-up received about 100 orders per month. They now receive more than 3,500.

Martín Ortega
Dir. of Operations Mission Box

"You can pick from any of the options that we have, such as food, drink, pharmacy products. If you cannot find what you want, we have a tab that says: make your wish".

"It's a very intuitive, easy to use app that delivers what you need, and you'll have it at home in a matter of minutes."

The products ordered are diverse. The business currently operates in Jaén, Granada and Malaga.

Dir. of Operations Mission Box

"If you've lost your keys, forgot a document that you need for a meeting, and you need someone to bring it to you".

In addition to the regular users of the application, the start-up also works for businesses including several local department stores in participating cities.
