

Olive oil extracted in the olive crop with a mobile oil mill created by an entrepreneur in Seville

LOCATION: Brenes (Seville)

DURATION: 1'39"

SUMMARY: Antonio Salas, an entrepreneur from Morón de la Frontera (Seville), started the 'Artesanos del Aceite' Company after losing his previous job. The idea is taking the oil mill to the olive crop so farmers can produce their own oil. After a month in the fields they have received calls from all around Andalusia.

VTR

The day starts with the harvest, the next step is putting olives in this deposit, just a few meters from the olive tree and the process starts. We have the final product in just a few minutes: organic extra olive oil extracted in the olive crop thanks to this mobile oil mill.

"I think this is the first one which is mobile. Today I am here and tomorrow I can be 50 or 100 km away, in other farm, in other company."

LUIS SALAS
Oil artisan

"We practically take to the hands of costumers, producers, costumers who are also producers sometimes, unfiltered oil made as they want and in the exact moment of optimal ripeness."

Antonio Salas has just started this project mainly aimed at small farmers. This way they can produce their own oil in the farm, controlling the process and with no need to depend on industrial mills. Oil for their own consumption or to be sold. Like in every entrepreneurship story, all started with a dream...

LUIS SALAS
Oil artisan

"I always knew that a small farmer was nobody in big mills."

ANTONIO SALAS

"It was my brother's dream. I have made it a reality and we have put it on the ground."

LUIS SALAS
Oil artisan

"I always thought of a small mil, I dreamt on one almost domestic."

The oil mil grinds between 200 and 300 kilograms of olives per hour. But, where does the generated waste go?

ANTONIO SALAS
Oil artisan

"Oil is extracted from that mass and the result is an ecological waste which can be used as compost."

After a month in the fields they have received calls from all around Andalusia. The goal of this entrepreneur: producing high quality oil in the olive crop.
