

Cokuiri: meetings in the kitchen thanks to a social network which gathers culinary lovers

LOCATION: San José de la Rinconada (Sevilla)

DURATION: 1'31"

SUMMARY: Cokuiri is a project started by three friends who are entrepreneurs and culinary lovers. Users meet through a social network and organise meetings to cook and eat together. This project has been started in Seville, but it is already starting to spread to the rest of Spain.

VTR:

There's a whole story behind this toast and this dinner, the story of Cokuiri... a social network born in Seville. Users meet there and organise meetings to cook and eat together. This time; Rodrigo, a member of the community, is organising a dinner at his place. And, what does Cokuiri mean?

MARÍA ALONSO
Creator of Cokuiri.com

"The first part, 'co' transmits the value of sharing, doing collaborative things; and 'kui' means kitchen in Esperanto, which is the universal language."

Jaime, another user, will be joining them. Andrea is also in; as well as Alegría. In the meantime, the host goes shopping.

MARÍA JOSÉ MOLINA
Creator of Cokuiri.com

"It is always the host who decides who is assisting to the event or not."

Depending on the references of the user who want to join in, the capacity of their house.

PABLO GONZÁLEZ
Creator of Cokuiri.com

"There are always new people, new techniques, recipes and experiences in each event."

MARÍA JOSÉ MOLINA
Creator of Cokuiri.com

"Those people who are part of Cokuiri also organise meetings for other activities like going to the Alamillo, planning a bike route, going to the mountain, to a concert..."

But today they cook. The menu is salty creps and watermelon and cheese skewers. Collaboration and having a good time are required.

MARÍA ALONSO
Creator of Cokuiri.com

"We are starting by Seville, but there have been other simultaneous events in Málaga, some in Zaragoza too..."

AMBIENCE: "For good food, good people..."

This is the story of a dinner, of a new trend started by culinary lovers who are eager to meet.
