Christian Orejuela
CEO of Happy Box

"Each time, people have more of a necessity to receive a product as quickly as possible. One cannot wait 24 or 72 hours to receive what they have bought. This is the easiest way to send what you want in less than an hour."

It also presents an opportunity to the unemployed, or to people who are looking for extra income or have some free hours to collaborate with the initiative.

"People that need some extra income, or people who simply do not have actual work."

Juan Pineda
Responsible for Development
Happy Box

"In Málaga, in some two weeks, we have received approximately 320 inquiries from messengers interested in working with Happy Box."

Diego Carrasco
Happy Box Messenger

"Well, I learned about Happy Box through a friend, and it helps me to have some extra income."

Another of the platform's objectives is to make e-businesses more competitive within Spain, thanks to this express service that is very easy to use.

José Carlos Ferrer
CTO en Happy Box

"You take a picture of the package, choose the place of origin and the place where you want to send it. The messengers see it and the one interested in it accepts it, and from there, the package is transported in less than one hour."

Laura Gómez
Happy Box User

"Who hasn't forgotten something at some point? And that you, a relative or a friend, can receive it in your own city, in less than one hour...I believe that is really useful."

The Happy Box service is currently working in Málaga, and soon will spread to Madrid, and another 7 Spanish cities before the end of 2015. By 2016 they expect to make the leap to Latin America.
